Over 2022, Singapore has continued to strengthen its position as a major global hub for technology, innovation, and talent. The government's focus on the digital sector, along with its efforts to attract foreign investment, has led to significant growth in the technology industry. The government's commitment to innovation and talent development, along with its efforts to attract foreign investment, has led to significant growth in the technology industry. It is difficult to avoid, further, suggesting something about the history of migration during the 1990s. That decade, especially in those three years, is particularly marked by processes that produce great global migration and mobility. The last century, and in the United States, is that of "transcultural migration" (Muniz 1999: 109). The 1990s, the decade of ENO, and globalization, had, however, not produced a global mobility that was a new kind of transnational mobility.
